

or impractical, this approach was taken to represent a worst-case short-term emission scenario that, when shown to have results below regulatory thresholds, gives a high level of confidence that human health will be protected. Emission rates used for the short-term modeling analysis are given with the model source parameters in Table 5-2. For the annually averaged AAC (HCl), the maximum potential annual emission rates were modeled.