

Public Trust Doctrine in Georgia Cases

- No discussion of the public trust doctrine in caselaw for navigable, non-tidal streams.
 - For instance, in Parker v. Durham, there was no discussion of whether the state owned the beds of navigable waters in trust for the public at statehood and what that meant.
- But, Georgia caselaw has recognized a public right of passage on all rivers and streams that are susceptible of use for a common passage. E.g., Young v. Harrison.
