

The Vision

OSP is working towards an interdependent economic development model, one in which the private sector and government alike support the development of vital infrastructure and services -- deploying a combination of targeted grants, entitlements, concessional loans, and charitable contributions -- and working collaboratively through the prism of one of the world's great natural resources.

We believe it is vital to recognize that the sustainability of Okefenokee is only as great as the strength and resilience of the local communities and stakeholders that surround it.
